

Wrangler Clothing & Western Wear

Over the last century, the Titley name has been synonymous with quality clothing and customer satisfaction. As a proud supplier of Wrangler jeans in Australia, W. Titley & Co delivers practical work wear that consumers can don in the office and other professional settings, as well as more casual outfits that are great for get-togethers and special occasions.

Wrangler is renowned for their iconic selection of cowboy wear that serves to epitomise the image of a typical rancher. However, W. Titley & Co goes above and beyond by not only stocking Wrangler's traditional collection of cowboy wear, but also availing modern western designs that are designed to fit a wide variety of body shapes and sizes, from Wrangler jackets to Wrangler shirts and other stylish apparel.

What is a wrangler vs. a cowboy?

By definition, a cowboy is someone who takes care of cattle, often on a horseback. The role of a cowboy usually involves herding cattle and performing a number of ranch-related tasks.

On the other hand, a wrangler is a person who cares for the horses used by other cowboys and ranch hands. This means that wranglers are a subcategory of cowboys, as they focus on a specific element of ranch work that involves managing the horses that cowboys use.

Both these sets of people make up a large part of ranch life, but ironically, Wrangler's clothing brand has generally catered to the cowboy image that serves as the face of their apparel.

Is Wrangler an Australian brand?

Wrangler is an American brand founded in the state of North Carolina. Its origin dates back to the year 1947, where a denim manufacturing company called Blue Bell began with the ambition to create the world's best five pocket jeans.

Although the jeans maker has its roots firmly entrenched in American soil, it has a separate entity called Wrangler Australia. This company is a local take on the global Wrangler brand, as its products are uniquely designed and marketed towards consumers in Australia and New Zealand.

With a specific focus on Australian style, Wrangler Australia caters towards the needs of Oceania through ethically sourced, heritage-inspired denim that is of the highest quality material.

W. Titley & Co works directly with Wrangler Australia to ensure that their products are available for the Australian subset of consumers.
